3. Make a precis of the following passage in about 1/3 of its total length. Also suggest a suitable title. 14

'There is something radically wrong with the entire structure of human relationship that makes man delight in killing man whether it be in the name of civilization' or religion or anything else. Two wrongs do not make a right, hatred must beget hatred and what is brought into being by violence can and will always be destroyed by greater violence. It is this fundamental truth that women have got to bring home to the people in their respective countries. No peace treaties can avail that have revenge as their basis and a self righteous arrogance and hypocrisy in the so called victory. Women are the natural preservers of life. Life grows from within them. They could make their influence felt if they would be big enough to rise above the walls of narrow nationalism that confine us today. Just as communism calls the workers of the world to unite, let the women of the world unite and stake all for a life worth living. Love conquers all things. We have it in us to give if we could only realize our moral strength and be non-co-operative with violence in whatsoever form it raises its head.

UNIT - IV

4. Read the passage given below and answer the questions.

Bad manners probably do more to poison the stream of the general life than all the crimes in the calendar. For one wife who gets a black eye from an otherwise good natured husband there is a husband who lives a life of martyrdom under the shadow of morose temper. But all the same the law cannot become the guardian of our private manners. No code could cover the vast area of offence and our courts. Could not administer the law which governed our social civilities our speech, the tilt of our eye-brows and all our moods and manners while it is true that there is no law that compels us to say 'Please' or 'Thank You', but there is social practice much older and much more sacred than any law which enjoins us to be civil and the first requirement of civility is that we should acknowledge a service. 'Please' or 'Thank You' are the small change with which we pay our way as social beings.

Questions :

- (a) What poisons the stream of life ? 3
- (b) Which social practice is older than law ? 3
- (c) Use in sentences : morose, enjoins, martyrdom. 3
- (d) What does the writer mean by 'small change' ? 3
- (e) Give a suitable title to the passage. 2

4. Attempt a précis of the given passage in about 1/3 of its length and also suggest a suitable title : 14

"Law is harmful for numerous reasons. In the first place, once the process of law making has begun, it goes on endlessly. It is an attempt to make a generalisation fit a concrete case, and this, by the nature of the case, is bound to prove impossible, for every case should have a rule to its elf; hence laws have constantly to be remade or amended since the rigid classifications are always breaking down. Laws in their very nature "pretend to foretell events", because they claim a finality valid for all future circumstances. Therefore, they tend to stagnation and like every form of creed, become hindrance to progress by attempting to define a single standard of action and belief. Moreover, laws are uncertain. Their volume is vast, unmanageable, and contradictory; they can be quoted on both sides of case, nobody in any given instance can possibly know what the result of a lawsuit is going to be; so that recourse to legal process is just a gamble.

Law is only necessitated by, and relative to, the exercise of political force. It is evils, as all use of force is evil since it involves another standard than the individual's free and unfettered judgement; and it will perish when the necessity for such force ceases.

Translate the following passage into Hindi :

There is a distinction between fundamental rights and directive principles. If state violates the fundamental rights of the citizens courts can certainly protect these rights. But if the state avoids the directive principles, the courts are helpless to do anything. It is apparently clear that fundamental rights have been given legal sanctity, where as directive principles are not within the ambit of the courts.

The reality is that the directive principles guide the state in a constructive way. It is true that they have not been given legal recognition in the sense that courts can compel the state to follow these principles. But, at the same time, it is also true that if the citizens have political consciousness, the state can not afford to neglect these principles. The importance of these principles depends on the consideration that to what extent the Indian citizens are conscious towards this. If the people have power to control their elected leaders, any administrator may not afford to go against these principles.

"All Great thinkers live and more on a high plane of thought. It is only there they can breathe freely. It is only in contact with spirits like themselves they can live harmoniously and attain that serenity which comes from ideal companionship. The studies of all great thinkers must range along the highest attitude of human thought. I cannot remember the name of any illuminative genius who did not drink his inspiration from fountains of Ancient Greek and Hebrew writers or such among the modern as were pupils in ancient thought, and in, turn, became masters in their own. I have always thought that the strongest argument in favour of the Baconian theory was, that no man, however indubitable his genius, could have written the plays and sonnets that have come down to us under Shakespeare's name who had not the liberal education of Bacon. How this habit of intercourse with the Gods makes one impatient of mere men. The magnificent ideals that have ever haunted the human mind, and given us our highest proofs of a future immortality by reason of the impossibility of their fulfillment here are splintered into atoms by contact with life's realities. Hence comes our sublime discontent. You will notice that your first sensation after reading a great book is one of melancholy and dissatisfaction. The ideas, sentiments, expressions are so far beyond those of ordinary working life that you cannot turn aside from one to the other without an acute sensation and consciousness of the contrast.

Questions :

- (i) On what plane must great thinkers live and move? 2
- (ii) Is a liberal education necessary to produce great literature? 2
- (iii) How is great literature far off from the realities of life? 2
- (iv) Why does the reading of a great book, according to the author, make one melancholy and disappointed? 2

(in addition of 127 sh)

Illuminative Genius, Indubitable, Sublime discontent.
