Chairman (TESWS) New Delhi

lity continued to remain in the 'poor' category for the fourth consecutive day on Monday, with the air quality index (AQI) at 247. In some stations like Chandni Chowk, Jahangirpuri, Shadipur, NSUT Dwarka and Mundka, the air quality deteriorated to 'very poor' and the AQI was over 300.

Though Delhiites have been breathing bad air, measures under Stage I of the Graded Response Action Plan are yet to be implemented.

When contacted, there was no immediate response from the Commission for Air Quality Management.

According to Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) data, Delhi's air quality was in the higher end of the 'moderafurther deterioration in the days that followed. The AQI was 281 on May 5.

Immediate action to improve air is unlikely, but it may record 'poor' days.

The air quality is expected to stay 'poor' according to the Air Quality Management Board's Warning System.
