Contempt of court is showing disrespect to the dignity or the decisions of the court. Contempt in the face of the court means disrespect which the judges see with his own eyes. For such contempts the judge does not need any evidence; he becomes the judge and the prosecutor and he can convict the criminal immediately.

The most famous case of contempt of court happened in 1631. A prisoner threw a brickbat at the judge of Assize (Assize means sessions held periodically in every English county to try civil and criminal cases before high court judges). The bat narrowly missed its aim, yet the criminal's hand was cut off and fixed to the gibbet. Later he was executed in the presence of the court. When Denning was a Junior lawyer, a man threw a tomato at the judge. The tomato missed its aim and hit the penalting with a loud noise. The culprit was immediately sentenced to three week's imprisonment. Denning was sitting as a Judge with Justice Bucknill, a man smashed a glass window on a hot summer day to let in some fresh air. The man was convicted for contempt of court but he was dealt with for damages.

Vanhattan: Well, is it? We found that culture enshrined in British material works of art: in the stately homes of your nobility, in the cathedrals our common forefathers built as the country houses of God. What did you do with them? You sold them to us. I was brought up in the shade of Ely cathedral, the removal of which from the county of Cambridge to New Jersey was my dear old father's big professional job. The building, which stands on its former sites, is a very fine one.

Or

Magnus: Well, what more can you ask? Don not let us fall into the common mistake of expecting to become one flesh and one spirit. Every star has its own orbit, between it and its nearest neighbor there is not only a powerful attraction but an infinite distance. When the attraction becomes stronger than the distance the two do not embrace: they crash together in ruin.
