New Delhi: Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) can carry out thermal scanning of passengers, check their risk status on Aarogya Setu app, sanitise their bags and hands and ensure everyone follows social distancing. But there is one thing they can't do — scan for Delhi's infamous 'challa hai' attitude. There's no app for that.

An unusually high number of DMRC and Central Industrial Security Force (CISF) personnel, apart from civil defence volunteers, were ensuring on Thursday that all safety norms related to Covid-19 were diligently followed in all metro stations, right from the entry point to the frisking point and then platforms. However, once inside the train, some passengers could be seen throwing all caution to the wind when the Red (Rithala, Shaheed Stadi), Violet (Kashmere Gate-Badli) and Green lines (Indraprastha, Badli) trains departed.

A sizeable number of passengers were wearing face masks while the majority of commuters were wearing face coverings. But, there were a few monthly, affordable, no-charge earplugs available for commuters to use during their journey.

THEIR CARELESSNESS CAN COST YOU

ones who could easily get infected or infect others were those who came in wearing a mask but quickly removed it, pulled it down to their neck or kept it hanging from their ear. Despite DMRC constantly urging commuters through advisories and public announcements — to not only wear face masks throughout the journey but also talk less to minimise the risk of the virus spreading, some commuters were seen talking on the phone with a passenger nearby. A mask-carrying on a loud conversation and even finishing the call by using the person at the other end of his own well-being and the safety of his fellow passengers. Having as the metro body of a 1000 employees, DMRC has a total of 1000 employees.

More than 4,000 new cases were reported in the past two days, some passengers didn't seem concerned about following norms prescribed for containing the spread of Covid-19 and putting other passengers at grave risk by their irresponsible behaviour. A majority of passengers could be seen wearing face masks properly throughout the journey that completely covered their nose and mouth, minimising the risk of spreading infection. Though some passengers could also be seen wearing face shields. They were those who covered their faces with handkerchiefs or a cloth. On the fourth day of the operation, DMRC has reported a record of 65,000 passengers who used both hands and face masks.

interchange hub and meeting point of three corridors — Red, Violet and Yellow — there are only two entry gates for passengers. On the busy Preet Vihar-Laxmi Nagar section of Blue Line, people faced problems because all stations have two entrances — on either side of Vikas Marg. If they chose the wrong gate, they had to cross the busy artery to access the open gate.

At the Red Line stations, however, commuters weren't inconvenienced because most of them have only one entrance. Between Kashmere Gate and Dilshad Garden, all stations on the line are located off GT Road.

Since Delhi Metro services are resuming in a gradual manner with new travel norms because of Covid-19, there is going to be a visible change in the commuting experience from the pre-lockdown days," explained Anuj Nayal, executive director (corporate communications), DMRC, noting as the new norms regulated entry gates, interchanges and tokens, and other safety distancing.

New Delhi: Ragnath Gautam, who works at Nehru House on Bahadur Shah Zafar Marg in ITO, had to walk a bit more to reach his office from the metro station that reopened on Thursday after five months. Gautam was among those who had their way barred at the ITO station by CISF personnel because only one exit was in use. Nehru House is close to Gate No.4, but it was shut. So he had to exit from Gate No.5, further away.

Gautam's grouse was that there are many offices near Gate No.4 and it would have been logical to have kept that open. Not surprisingly, this gate, being closed confused many Satinder, who wanted to reach Delhi Police Headquarters, which is next to Gate No.3, actually walked away from that gate under the impression that it was not open.

At Kashmere Gate, an interchange station, a visibly harassed Spanish Pal spent time searching for the entrance. He said, "Metro's largest
