Chandrabala, who holds the portfolio of Food, Supplies and Consumer Affairs Department, presided over a video review meeting regarding the arrangements being made in the state's grain mandis for the procurement of rabi crops. The meeting was attended by Deputy Commissioners District Food and Supplies, Chandrabala and other senior officers of all the districts of the state.

The operators claim that the continuous increase in diesel prices has badly affected their business and they were finding it hard to keep the business afloat in the current situation. Surinder Sharma, a bus operator, said, "The fuel is getting costlier but the fare is not being increased. The government will bear the loss of the roadways department, but who will bear the losses of cooperative societies. We have monthly instalments for the buses and are also required to pay other taxes and salaries of the employees. The government should provide some relief to cooperative societies. We had also introduced the Vivek Chaudhary, another bus operator, said, "Increase in fare is an option but ultimately the burden will be shifted to passengers only. And if the government doesn't want to shift the entire burden on the common man, it should come out with some policy and provide relief to the bus operators in the form of taxes or provide subsidy on diesel purchase. If the fuel prices continue to the government in the past. If the fare is not increased, we will be forced to move the High Court and seek direction for the state." Dalbir Singh, state president, Transport Societies Bus Welfare Association Haryana, said, "We are facing different issues, including rising fuel prices and toll taxes, and the association will raise the issues with the government soon."

The Bench was told that the village panchayat, too, had performed its part of obligation by depositing the requisite amount for constructing the

Rice exporter develops device to curb pollution

PARYEN ANOHA
TRIPURA, MARCH 31

In a bid to reduce industrial pollution, a Kamal-based exporter has claimed to have developed a mechanical device using absorbent to capture carbon dioxide (CO2) and sulfur dioxide (SO2). The machine will also reduce the temperature of the emission gases by two-thirds. Vijay Setia, managing director of Channan Lal Setia Exports Pvt and former president of All India Rice Exporters Association (AIREA) and Ravi Sanyal from IIT Kharagpur have jointly developed this mechanism.

The device will capture carbon dioxide and sulphur dioxide and reduce temperature of waste gases. THE PHOTO mechanical system which can be installed in the emission line. The gas absorbent fitted in the device act as a filter which cleans the gases and also reduces the temperature. Setia said Setia have filed a patent. Once the device is patented, I will encourage industrialists to adopt this device."

INNOVATION
Through mechanical design, the flue gas (sometimes called exhaust gas or stack gas) coming out from the boiler are passed on the device that is based on a special absorbent. The absorbent captures unburnt carbon and other inflammable particles that can be later used as a fuel. I have filed for a patent.

Why Setia, declares

Setia said Setia have filed a patent. Once the device is patented, I will encourage industrialists to adopt this device."

Many industries discharge harmful materials and gases such as ash, fine particles of incomplete combustion, carbon, and nitric oxides. These can also lead high temperature in the adjacent areas.

The developers believe this mechanism will help in reducing the pollution and also the dependency on compressed natural gas and piped natural gas.
