New Delhi: Tucked away in the heart of Naraina Vihar, a small police station has become an unlikely haven for students. Nineteen-year-old Tanu, who lives in a slum colony nearby, arrives at the police station at 9am every day. Tanu is not a cop, just one of the 160 students from the area who frequent the makeshift library at the police station.

GIVING WINGS: The makeshift library has become a safe space for students from economically disadvantaged families.

This cosy library, nestled within the station, has become a game-changer for these students from economically disadvantaged families. Tanu, who is preparing for the medical entrance exam, NEET, said, "In my home, I constantly struggle with limited internet access. The library has been operating now for six months and is equipped with a biometric entry system, well-stocked bookshelves, high-speed internet and computer. TOI spoke to the staff to learn how this initiative is changing the lives of these students. "The tools and techniques we use here are explained to the students only when they are ready to learn," said the staff. "We are funded to look at our en-told Lok Sabha that it was 'extremely unfortunate' that farmers in the region were being deprived of crucial benefits.

"I request the Delhi govt to implement farmer-centric schemes for the benefit of farmers as there is agricultural land and farming activity around Delhi," he added, while responding to a query pertaining to direct benefit transfer for farmers using organic fertilisers in the Lok Sabha during the Question Hour. Recently, Union minister Mansukh Mandaviya slammed the AAP for not implementing the Ayushman Bharat health insurance scheme.
