Chaudhry Ranbir Singh Institute of Social & Economic Change

Maharshi Dayanand University Rohtak, Haryana

(A State University established under Haryana Act No. XXV of 1975)

(‘A+’ Grade University Accredited by NAAC)

Concept Note:

The One-Day National Seminar aims to explore the multi-faceted dimensions of the Sarasvati River, delving into its mythological significance, geographical dimensions, and untapped tourism potential. Sarasvati, revered in ancient Indian scriptures as a sacred river, has been a subject of scholarly debate, and cultural significance.

The mythological perspective of Sarasvati River traces its roots in Hindu mythology, where it is revered as the goddess of knowledge, music, and art. The seminar will unravel the intricate narratives surrounding Sarasvati, examining the various mentions in Vedic texts, Puranas, and epics, and how these mythological threads have woven into the cultural tapestry of the Indian subcontinent.

In addition to its mythological importance, the seminar will delve into the geographical dimensions of the Sarasvati River. While the river itself is believed to be lost to the sands of time, scholars and researchers have attempted to trace its course through geological studies, satellite imagery, and archaeological findings. The seminar will provide a platform for experts to present and discuss their research findings, fostering a comprehensive understanding of the river's historical and geographical significance.

Furthermore, the seminar will explore the untapped tourism potential associated with Sarasvati River. The region believed to have been traversed by Sarasvati holds archaeological treasures, historical sites, and natural landscapes that could be developed into tourism hubs. By bringing together scholars, archaeologists, geographers, and tourism experts, the seminar aims to identify opportunities for sustainable tourism development, preserving the cultural heritage while boosting local economies.

The One-Day National Seminar on "Sarasvati River: Mythological Perspective, Geographical Dimensions, and Tourism Potential" seeks to provide a holistic platform for interdisciplinary discussions, fostering a deeper understanding of the river's diverse facets. The event will encourage collaboration among scholars, researchers, and practitioners, paving the way for future studies and initiatives that contribute to the preservation and promotion of the rich cultural and geographical heritage associated with Sarasvati River.

Department of Geography

The Department of Geography came into existence in 1983 with a vision to become a leading center of teaching, learning, and research on the interface between physical and human domains. A distinct identity for the department is its interdisciplinary nature with an emphasis on spatial thinking. The department is multifaceted and has diverse fields ranging from geosciences, and GIS, to social and cultural geography. The broad academic backgrounds of the faculty and the spatial thinking approach make the department easy to connect with many other disciplines in collaborative endeavors. The vision of the department is to lead the interdisciplinary investigation of many critical social and natural challenges and problems tied to regional, landscape, and environmental changes through a spatiotemporal lens. We emphasize geospatial concepts and lead the development of geography, and GIS programs to attract outstanding graduate and research students and faculty. Our faculty's research focuses on GIS, earth-environment interactions, human dimensions of climate change, and spatial analysis of social issues. These four clusters emphasize the importance of space, place, humans, and the environment in addressing important research issues across natural and social sciences. The overarching goal of our programs is to train the next generation of students to serve society and be critical spatial thinkers, using geographic theories and approaches to tackle some of the most challenging problems and questions facing the discipline and society.
